With its soaring cliffs, dramatic canyons and endless shades of green, Kaua'i invites you to renew your connection with nature again and again.

● Nāpali Coast

This 17-mile stretch of ruggedly beautiful mountains sits on Kaua'i's northwest coast. Accessible only by air, boat and on foot, it is one of the precious jewels in the crown of the Hawaiian Islands. Note: An advanced paid permit is required to gain entrance into Hā'ena State Park. gohaena.com

● Daniel K. Inouye Kilauea Point Lighthouse

This historic landmark sits majestically on the northernmost peninsula of the island, providing scenic views of the dramatic cliffs and coastline. The Kilauea Point National Wildlife Refuge is just around the bend, bringing Hawai'i's rare and unique nesting seabirds close to view. Reservations are required to enter the Kilauea National Wildlife Refuge, where the lighthouse is located.

● Waimea Canyon

One of Kaua'i's biggest attractions, this impressive canyon provides stunning views of Kaua'i's lush valleys and tropical forest canopies. There are numerous lookouts if sightseeing by car, as well as over 45 miles of hiking trails. The air is cool at these high elevations, so pack a jacket or sweater.

● Kōke'e State Park

This park encompasses more than 4,000 acres on a high plateau covered in forest, sprinkled with wildflowers and crisscrossed with hiking trails. At Kōke'e Natural History Museum, there are exhibits on the unique flora of the area, along with maps of hiking trails and nature walks.

● Wailua Falls

Wailua Falls is located at the southern end of the Wailua River. It's usually seen as two falls until rain transforms them into one. Rainbows often appear in the morning when sunlight paints the 80-foot waterfall molten silver. Used in the opening credits of the TV show Fantasy Island, Wailua Falls is easily accessible for viewing.

● Lydgate Beach Park

With its two lava-rock-enclosed ocean pools, you'll find this area just south of the Wailua River. This guarded beach is calm enough for keiki (children) and good for beginner snorkelers.

● Po'ipū Beach Park

The inviting waters of Po'ipū make it popular with visitors, locals and even marine life. From December through May, it's not uncommon to spot humpback whales spouting offshore. Po'ipū Beach is also well known for the endangered Hawaiian monk seals that sometimes sunbathe on its shores. Please remain at least 50 yards away from monk seals.

● Kōloa

This historic town was Hawai'i's first productive sugar plantation, established in 1835. The area has retained much of its old charm, and many plantation buildings still decorate it. View old photos and artifacts from Kōloa's early years at the Kōloa History Center and browse Kōloa's many shops in the ample shade of large monkeypod trees.

● Kapa'a Town

Be sure to find time for a leisurely stroll through this charming town. You'll find a smart blend of handmade and fine items, including some great Hawaiian craft pieces, aloha-print shirts, jewelry and fine art objects. A variety of dining options are available here as well.

● Hanalei

The grandeur of Kaua'i's North Shore is revealed from the picture-perfect Hanalei Valley Lookout. The small, peaceful town of Hanalei is filled with colorful shops, restaurants and unique art galleries. Home to the Hanalei National Wildlife Refuge, take a guided tour (the only way to access this area) through the lo'i kalo (taro patches) and learn about kalo (taro), an important staple food in Hawai'i. Or, pack a picnic and venture out to Hanalei Bay.

● Kilohana Plantation

This early 1900s plantation estate is a unique place to shop and dine. Board the Kaua'i Plantation Railway for a train ride through the plantation's 36-acre grounds. Located at the plantation, Kōloa Rum Company is Kaua'i's first commercial distiller, blender and bottler of premium rum in Hawai'i.

● Fern Grotto

Fringed with hanging ferns, this natural lava-rock grotto was an exclusive destination for Hawaiian royalty. Today, open-air boats offer guided tours of the area. Acting as a natural amphitheater, this romantic site is also a popular wedding venue.

● Spouting Horn Park

The surf of the south side pushes through a natural lava tube, causing the water to shoot up to 60 feet high during a large swell. Enjoy convenient access to this park and the luminous view from the lookout at sunset.
